

WRITE TO A NEBRASKA PRISON REBEL

As the country is hit with wave after wave of prison rebellion, writing to a prison rebel is more than an act of care. It is also a move to link up with and provide material aid to an ongoing rebellion against society.

SEND A LETTER OR A ZINE, AN ARTICLE OR SOME PICTURES. ASK WHAT SUPPORT IS NEEDED. BUILD TRUST AND A COMMON LANGUAGE WITH PRISON REBELS IN YOUR REGION. STAY IN TOUCH SO ANY NEWS OF REBELLION REACHES YOU QUICKLY. AMPLIFY AND GENERALIZE REBELLIONS AS THEY OCCUR.

On Mother's Day, 2015, prisoners at Tecumseh State Correctional Institution in Nebraska took control of multiple housing units in the prison, including staff offices. Prisoners of all races fought off guards together, set fires, destroyed walls and other infrastructure. They used office phones to call their mothers and the media.

One prisoner wrote this about the events:

"It wasn't just me who made a courageous stand! It was a multitude of us from all races — black, white, brown, straight and gay. Everything that happened that day was a concerted effort by every man who had grown tired of all the injustice inside and outside these razor wire fences. I'm so very proud of these men . . ."
